Not Executed Formally, but Merely Written on a Sheet of Note Paper by the Tes-tator-Presented France Under Gines, geldence for the probate of the will and codicil of Egisto P. Fabbri, the wealthy hanker and importer, who died at Florence, Italy, last June, was taken before Probate Clerk Washburn yesterday. Fabbri, before he went to reside at Florence several years ago, had an interest in the banking firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co. An amdavit presented to the Surrogate yesterday showed that he left an estate of $1,900,000. An interesting feature of the probate proceedings was the codicil. It was written in lead pencil on a half sheet of notepaper, and was filed for probate under a glass framed. The will had been executed Nov. 26, 1890, at New York, and this codicil was not executed according to our It is in the handwriting of the decedent,

IS GOOD IN ITALY.

THE FRAMED CODICIL. The text of the codicil is as follows: For good, ample, and sufficient reasons I add this odicil to my last will and testament made and re-orded in New York under date of Nov. 28, 1890. My object, desire, and last will is to revoke all that part of said my last will and testament which refers to the portions of my estate that are to be held in trust for my adoptive children, it being now my wish that no such trusts be created, and that my said children besuch trusts be created, and that my said children become free owners of the entire portion of my estate that will belong to them, subject, of course, to each and every one of the other conditions and depositions contained in my said will and testament dated New York, Nov. 26, 1890.

FLORENCE, May 25, 1894.

The results of the contained of the

The residue of the estate, to which alone the odicil applies, is put at $1,626,751. The will left this residue so that half of it should go to eight nephews and nieces, whom the testator had adopted, in such proportion that a nephew should receive twice as much as a niece. They were to get this half on coming of age. The other half was to be held in trust for them in like proportions, they to get the income of this half for life, with remainder over to their issue, if the codicil is valid these children will get absolutely the entire residue on coming of age.

It was contended that the codicil, which could not be probated if written here, owing to its non-execution, should be considered valid here, as it is valid under the laws of Italy, where it was written. After George S. Bowdoin and Charles W. King of the firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co., who were witnesses of the will, had proved that document, the codicil was taken up. Cesare Cologna, a lawyer of Italy, testified that by the laws of that country the codicil was valid as it stood. A deposition of Luigi Roversi, also a lawyer of Italy, attested the validity of the codicil under the law of that country. Both witnesses said that the fact that the codicil was written and signed in lead pencil did not affect its validity. It would not here. Sections of the Italian law on the subject and of our code making valid a paper here which is properly executed in a foreign country were submitted with the papers. eight nephews and nieces, whom the testator charles H. Coster, named as executor, subse-uently qualified. The other executors and the Charles H. Coster, named as executor, subsequently qualified. The other executors named were J. Hood Wright, recently deceased, of the firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co., and the decedent's wifs, Mary. The adopted nephews and nieces to whom the large residue goes are Egisto P. Fabbri, Ernestine Fabbri, Alessandro Fabbri, Sara Ernestine Fabbri, Marie Pauline Fabri, Alice Louise Fabbri, Nathalie Fabbri, and Cora R. Fabbri. They are the children of Ernesto G. Fabbri, also an importer of this city, who died in 1883.

LATEST LONDON QUOTATIONS.

THURSDAY, Dec. 27. On a much smaller volume of business than vesterday the Granger stocks closed fractionally higher, and Distilling and Cattle Feeding a point lower. The changes in the course of these stocks was due entirely to professional operations. To be more explicit, room traders who sold the Granger stocks yesterday covered them to-day, and operators who were bullish on Dis-tilling endeavored to secure their meagre profits. In consequence that stock closed a point lower than yesterday. The only other stocks that suffered to the same extent were Reading and did not attract as much attention, however, as a fractional loss in Jersey Central, and a material advance in United States Cordage securities. These last appear to have been unduly depressed, particularly by the circulation of miseading reports as to the financial condition of the market. It is conceded that the industry is dull and at the moment unprofitable, but it is not true, as reported to-day, that a crisis in its affairs is imminent; on the contrary arrange-ments were made several weeks ago that will supply the company with all the funds it may require for some months to come. Court Calendars This Day,

The committee of sugar importers appointed Secretary Carlisle whereby raw sugars should have uniform appraisements at the port of New York met in Skiddy, Minford & Co.'s offices, at

The report of the committee says that it is apparent that the appraisers at the stores in Laight street have been forced to deviate from the Administrative Customs act of 1890 in order to give effect to the sugar schedules of the Tariff act of 1894. All that the committee is after, it declares, is to get Treasury regulations made that will secure to the Government its just dues, prevent injustice to the importer, and more charly define the path of the appraising officers.

The committee's report was adopted, and George Mosle, Chairman; John Farr, Secretary, and J. S. Connell and Osgood Welsh will present the report to Secretary Carlisle.
